Introduction

This is a listing of thesis and dissertation titles completed by graduate students affiliated with the ILR School, Cornell University. It updates the 2006 document, ILR School Theses and Dissertations: a listing and covers the latter part of 2006 through 2007.

The basis for this listing is the Cornell Graduate School publication, Advanced Degrees Conferred. Additional information was transferred from the Cornell Classic Catalog.

It is anticipated that this will be the final update of the ILR theses and dissertations listings, as researchers can view Advanced Degrees Conferred online from 2008-, via the eCommons@Cornell digital repository <http://ecommons.library.cornell.edu/handle/1813/17324>. In the ILR School, theses are written to fulfill the Master of Science degree requirements and dissertations are written in order to achieve a Doctorate of Philosophy. To discover ILR degrees, search or scroll through those sections in Advanced Degrees Conferred looking for "Industrial and Labor Relations" or an ILR School advisor.

Cornell-affiliated researchers have several avenues for obtaining full text of theses and dissertations:

1. Search for the work in the Cornell Classic or WorldCat catalogs. Typically, there are two print copies of a Cornell thesis or dissertation. One is available for loan and the other is an archival copy that is available for use in the library only. Frequently, for newer theses, researchers will find an electronic copy from the eCommons@Cornell digital repository also listed in the Cornell Classic Catalog. The electronic copies may have use restrictions, but many have open Internet access.
2. Researchers can browse or search the Cornell Graduate School's section of eCommons to find both Open and Closed-access theses and dissertations.
3. The Cornell University Library subscribes to the database, ProQuest Dissertations and Theses, which provides full text of many theses and dissertations from Cornell and other universities. (This database has to be searched separately, as its titles are not included in the library catalogs.)

Researchers that are not affiliated with Cornell should inquire at their local libraries about borrowing Cornell theses via Interlibrary Loan. They may also be able to purchase some titles via ProQuest Dissertation Express.
