How is a City Manager different than a Mayor?
North District Councilmember Joe Golombek has proposed that Buffalo consider reforming city government by having a city manager rather than a mayor.\(^9\)

- City managers and mayors have the same basic responsibilities and decision-making power.\(^{10}\)
- Unlike mayors, who are elected by the city electors, city managers are professionals appointed by city councils.\(^{10}\)
- Although the city manager model is less democratic, it is also “impartial, professional, and nonpolitical.”\(^{10}\)
- City managers are educated, trained, professionally certified and have experience running cities whereas mayors are not required to meet any of these qualifications.\(^{10}\)
- Rather than eliminating mayors, some cities utilize a full-time, professional city manager to manage the city’s daily operations, and the mayor fills an ambassador-type role for the city.\(^9\)

What have recent Buffalo Mayors been known for?
- Mayor Makowski served from 1974-1977. He was a Democrat. He helped prepare the 1973-1974 budget which gave residents their first tax cut in eight years. He won the general election by the largest victory margin in Buffalo history. He served as Mayor during the blizzard of ’77. His major accomplishments included building the Convention Center, downtown redevelopment and building an industrial park at William and Lewis streets. He was criticized for placing an occupancy tax on occupants of commercial and residential buildings to help fund the Municipal Housing Authority deficit.
- Mayor Griffin served from 1978-1993.
  o Although Mayor Griffin was a Democrat, he was endorsed by: Conservatives in the 1977 election; Democrats, Republicans, Conservatives and Right to Life in the 1981 election; Republicans, Conservatives and Right to Life in the 1985 election; all four in 1989; and Right to Life in 1997.
  o He is the only Mayor to have served four terms.
  o He was known for being earnest, feisty, outspoken and a scrapper.
  o His accomplishments included building condominiums, hotels, town houses and office buildings on the waterfront and in other areas downtown, the Rotary Ice Rink, three bank office buildings at Fountain Plaza, parking ramps, walkways, the HSBC Bank Atrium, City Center, and a new City Mission and Cornerstone Manor. He also restored Shea’s Buffalo and cleaned up Hoyt Lake.
  o Some feel that his greatest accomplishment was construction of downtown’s Pilot Field (now Dunn Tire Park).
  o He was criticized for increased crime, decreased population, the closing of several downtown department stores, under-funded public schools, neglecting the East Side, employing few minorities in high positions and cutting more than 1,000 city employees. His parks commissioner was put in jail, and $746,000 in public funds went missing.

- Mayor Masiello served from 1994-2005.
  o He was a registered Democrat but was more conservative than the mainstream Democrats.
  o In his third term, he was endorsed by both Democratic and Republican parties.
  o His main area of attention was the city’s $25 million deficit.
  o He got state approval for a joint construction fund to renovate and build schools in the city.
  o The state imposed a Fiscal Control Board on the City in 2003.

- Mayor Brown began his term in 2006. o He is a Democrat.
  o His accomplishments include initiating a Zero Tolerance Law Enforcement program, creating the Buffalo Police Department’s Mobile Response Unit, starting the management accountability CitiStat Buffalo program, and expanding the Mayor’s Summer Youth Employment Program.\textsuperscript{34}

- His tenure has seen the beginning of construction of a new federal courthouse and the Inner Harbor waterfront mixed use development project.\textsuperscript{23}

- Criticisms of the Brown Administration include the Mayor’s installation of 100 surveillance cameras in various parts of the City,\textsuperscript{25} plans to build three new hotels downtown, including one at Erie Basin Marina,\textsuperscript{26} the failure to deal with “green issues” including low recycling rates, the lack of staff to develop plans to address environmental issues,\textsuperscript{27} and the demolition of abandoned buildings rather than trying to preserve or rehabilitate them.\textsuperscript{28}

- A survey of almost 150 government officials, business leaders and civil leaders by The Buffalo News revealed very split opinions regarding the Brown Administration.\textsuperscript{29} Overall, Mayor Brown’s “score” would have been about a C+, with most complaints focused on his inaccessibility, lack of decision-making, and giving Deputy Mayor Steve Casey too much power.\textsuperscript{29}

- The survey also suggested Mayor Brown’s administration was more professional and accountable than the past administration.\textsuperscript{29}
