Introduction

This report on the laws of Colombia governing exploitative child labor has been prepared pursuant to section 2102(c)(9) of the Trade Act of 2002 (“Trade Act”) (Pub. L. No. 107-210). Section 2102(c)(9) provides that the President shall:

with respect to any trade agreement which the President seeks to implement under trade authorities procedures, submit to the Congress a report describing the extent to which the country or countries that are parties to the agreement have in effect laws governing exploitative child labor.

The President, by Executive Order 13277 (67 Fed. Reg. 70305 (Nov. 21, 2002)), assigned his responsibilities under section 2102(c)(9) of the Trade Act to the Secretary of Labor, provided that they be carried out in consultation with the Secretary of State and the United States Trade Representative. The Secretary of Labor subsequently provided that such responsibilities would be carried out by the Secretary of State, the United States Trade Representative and the Secretary of Labor (67 Fed. Reg. 77812 (Dec. 19, 2002)). Pursuant to the Trade Act, this report contains information on laws governing exploitative child labor. Please see Sections V-C and V-D of the Department of Labor’s Colombia: Labor Rights Report for information on the incidence and nature of forced labor and child labor.

Exploitative Child Labor

There is no universally accepted definition of the term “exploitative child labor.” Under Article 2(3) of International Labor Organization (ILO) Convention 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, the minimum age of admission into employment or work in any occupation “shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling and, in any case, shall not be less than 15.” Countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the convention. Additionally, under Article 7(1), “National laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of persons 13 to 15 years of age on light work which is – (a) not likely to be harmful to their health or development; and (b) not such as to prejudice their attendance at school, their participation in vocational orientation or training programmes approved by the competent authority or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received.” Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit persons 12 to 14 years of age to engage in light work, as defined in Article 7(1). Examples of such light work may include work in family business, on a family farm, after school, or in a legitimate apprenticeship opportunity that is not hazardous and that does not affect a child’s attendance at school.

The ILO has defined the “worst forms” of child labor in ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor. Under Article 3 of ILO Convention 182, “the term worst forms of child labour” comprises:

(a) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale and trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom and forced or compulsory labour, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;

(b) the use, procuring or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography or for pornographic purposes;

(c) the use, procuring or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties;

(d) work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children.\(^1\)

According to Convention 182, the types of work referred to under Article 3(d) “shall be determined by national laws or regulations or by the competent authority….”\(^2\) Article 2 of the Convention states that, “the term child shall apply to all persons under the age of 18.”\(^3\)

This report relies primarily on information from the Department of State in Washington, D.C., the U.S. Embassy in Colombia, and from other U.S. Government reports. It also relies upon a wide variety of reports and materials originating from Colombia; international organizations such as the ILO; and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs). Finally, the report also makes use of information submitted in response to Department of Labor requests for public comment published in the \textit{Federal Register}.\(^4\)

\textbf{Colombia}

Colombia ratified ILO Convention No. 138 on Minimum Age of Employment on February 2, Colombia’s Constitution states that children are to be protected against exploitative and hazardous labor.\(^5\) The new minimum employment age in Colombia is 15 years, based on the Code of Childhood and Adolescence (2006), which supersedes the Minor's Code (1989).\(^6\) Prior to the adoption of the new code, the Minor’s Code had established the minimum age for employment at 14.7 Children under age 15 may receive permission from the Labor Inspectorate to work for pay in artistic, cultural, recreational or sports-related jobs, up to 14 hours per week.8

According to the Code of Childhood and Adolescence, parents of adolescents of legal working age wanting to work must receive authorization from the Labor Inspectorate.9 Among other provisions, the work authorization is contingent upon an official from the Inspectorate visiting the worksite to ensure that working conditions will not harm the health of the adolescent; the adolescent completing school or if not registered, being registered in school by the employer; and the employer obtaining a health certificate for the adolescent. The authorization must also include the terms of the work contract.10 Indigenous youth must receive permission from their respective traditional authority. If these requirements are not met, authorization can be denied or revoked.11

Adolescents ages 15 and 16 may only work six hours per day, 30 hours per week, and until 6 p.m. Adolescents age 17 may only work 8 hours per day, 40 hours per week, and until 8 p.m.12 Adolescents have a right to a salary commensurate with the work done and time worked and which is at least the legal minimum monthly salary.13 Pregnant working adolescents may only work four hours per day from the seventh month of pregnancy through lactation; there is to be no reduction in salary or benefits.14 No one under age 18 may perform work that is dangerous, detrimental to their health or welfare, or considered worst form of child labor. The Ministry of Social Protection (Ministerio de la Proteccion Social, MPS) and the Colombian Family Welfare Institute (Instituto Colombiano de Bienestar Familiar, ICBF) have responsibility for the identification of the worst forms of child labor.15

All worst forms of child labor, as defined by ILO Convention 182 and the Government of Colombia, are expressly prohibited.16 MPS Resolution 4448 of 2005 identifies the worst forms of child labor that are prohibited for all minors under age 18. According to the current list, minors cannot perform most work related to: agricultural work destined for market, such as coffee, flowers, sugarcane, cereals, vegetables, fruits, tobacco, and livestock; fisheries; logging; mining or work underground; industrial manufacturing and bakeries; utilities; construction, painting, and heavy equipment; transportation or warehousing; healthcare; defense and private security; and unskilled labor such as shoe shining, domestic service, trash collection, messenger service, building security, gardening, work in clubs and bars, and street sales. Minors must also not work under ground or water, under rigorous environmental conditions (e.g., hot or cold) or in conditions where there are: loud noises; strong vibrations; dangerous substances; poor lighting or ventilation; fluctuating barometric pressures; or biological or chemical materials. Youth cannot perform work that entails safety risks excessive physical activity, or may negatively affect the youth's posture. Minors may not work under conditions that would harm their psychosocial development, such as work without pay; work that interferes with schooling; work that keeps them separated from their families; work under despotic or abusive conditions; work in illegal or immoral situations; or with the exception of minors ages 16 or 17, work between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. Individuals must report child labor law violations.

The age limitation and ending work time in the Resolution 4448 and Code of Childhood and Adolescence are in disagreement. The Resolution states adolescents ages 16 and 17 can work until 8 p.m., while Article 114 of the Code states minors ages 15 and 16 can only work until 6 p.m. The ILO CEACR has requested clarification on exceptions in Resolution 4448 about when adolescents ages 16 and 17 may work at night.

Colombian law prohibits slavery, servitude, and human trafficking in all forms. Articles 213 and 214 of the Penal Code identify penalties for pimping of 32 to 72 months imprisonment and fines of 66.66 to 750 times the legal minimum monthly salary, with those for pimping children under age 14 increasing by one-third to one-half. The penalty for forced prostitution is 80 to 162 months imprisonment and fines of 66.66 to 750 times the legal minimum monthly salary. Article 216 states that penalties increase by one-third to one-half if the victim is under age 14 or if the crime involves international trafficking. Penalties for managing a brothel involving prostitution by minors are 96 to 144 months imprisonment with similar fines as above. Child pornography is punishable by the same prison sentences as for running a brothel, with fines from 133.33 to 1,500 times the legal minimum monthly salary. Penalties in both cases increase by one-third to one-half if the perpetrator is a family member. The use of the mail or Internet to obtain or offer sexual contact with a minor is punishable by 80 to 180 months incarceration and a fine of 66.66 to 150 times the legal minimum monthly salary, with penalties up to one-half if the minor involved is under age 12. Article 219 provides for fines of 13.33 to 75 times the legal
